

Atty St
Greenberg
Manchester
Xmas Day 1867

My Dear Friend
Wm Lloyd Garrison

315-

I have just got home from the Funeral of our dear mutual, most beloved friend and brother slave John Mansson!

I need not lacerate
either my own or your feelings by going into any of the terrible
details of that horrid
event in the Town Hall. You will have read all about it in the papers sent you,
and the awful calamity
is so recent that I cannot dwell upon
it calmly.

You know what a

less we have sustained
because you knew
the noble mental
social and personal qualities of the dear
gentle-beaked good man! I know you
loved him much,
as did all good men
who knew him; and
even bad men could not but esteem
him, when they knew
him.

I posted you yesterday
a Newcastle Chronicle
with report of the funeral obsequies. It will give you
an imperfect and
faint idea of the deep sympathy that has been evoked and
manifested.

You would see by his
(J. M.) last letter to me - published in the Callian news of the 14th inst - with the notice of his death,

that our dear departed
friend was anxious of
looking for a letter from you. I fear he had not that luxury;
but he knew from
the papers that you
had arrived safely.
I have heard of you
through our dear
friend Sir Thompson.
I am profoundly thankful that you have got back in health and
safely to your own
dear home; and
that you do not find dear Agassiz
worse - but somewhat better - I hope. When you next have
a visit to me

Scout Neal Owen has
also got safely home.
I have just got my first letter from him
written after his arrival. He tells me that he found all well
and bid a joyful
welcome.

Mr. A and the boys
all join me in
most loving regards Praying that your valuable life may long be spared to labor for and sympathize
with the progress
of humanity.

Believe me to remain in true
and tender bonds of brotherhood.

The H. Parker
